De Lima: I'm strong bet for Chief Justice

'Another Aquino, another dynasty'

By Leila B. Salaverria and Michael Lim-Uson

P-Noy wants US spy planes over disputed sea

PRESIDENT Aquino yesterday said he may ask the United States to deploy spy planes over the West Philippine Sea (South China Sea) to help monitor the disputed waters, a move that could worsen tensions with its giant neighbor China.

China and the Philippines only recently stepped back from a two-month standoff at Scarborough Shoal, a house-shaped reef within the Philippines' exclusive economic zone. The United States has said it is worried in the long-running maritime dispute and China has warned that "military force" should not get involved in the dispute.

"We might be requesting overflights on that," Mr. Aquino told Reuters in an interview, referring to US F-4C Phantom II jets.

But House leader says she and Carpio should withdraw

By Marlon Ramon

JUSTICE Secretary Leila de Lima regards herself as a strong and acceptable alternative to insiders in the Supreme Court for the seat left by ousted Chief Justice Renato Corona.

A day after seeking direct guidance during a pilgrimage to the residence of the late Lady of Manobo in Pangasinan province, De Lima expressed confidencé in her entry of President Aquino's cousin, Paolo Benigno "Bert" Aquino, in the ancestral race as dynasty-building, while allies of Malacanan hailed Ben's decision to run for the Senate as a political blessing.

The activist group, Anakbayan, voiced fears that having the President's relative in the Senate would strengthen the Aquinos' hold on power and that the Aquinos might use this to keep their control of the family's Hacienda Larena, a target for land reform.

Besides, said Anakbayan, now Aquino in government was already too strong.

"Is there any one else?" The 2012 senatorial elections are turning out to be one big PA trap (Dyopis with big polit).

Enrile's Cha-cha solution to PH security draws mixed reactions

By Cathy C. Yanesan

WHY NOT give defense second priority in government spending instead of amending the Constitution to put it over education at the top of the budget?

Colleagues made this countermove to Sen. President Juan Ponce Enrile yesterday in response to his suggestion that the Constitution be amended to make it more "flexible" and enable the government to deal better with security issues, such as defending the Philippines' territorial claims in the West Philippine Sea (South China Sea).

"If we want higher spending for the military, then there is no obstacle in making that the priority, but always after education," Sen. Aquilino Pimentel III said in a text message to the reporter. "By investing in education, we can never govern."

Enrile's mention of constitutional amendments is a major interview on Enrile drew critics, including from the House of Representatives and Malacanan.

House Majority Leader Negrill Gonzalez II yesterday said that the House had no time to handle constitutional amendments with only a year left before the term ends.

Spain's Queen Sofia is in town

By Jerry E. Espinosa

QUEEN SOFIA of Spain is in town for a four-day visit that the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) has described "as a positive reflection of the Philippines' long-standing and special partnership with Spain, most especially in the area of development cooperation."

The queen, an official guest of the Philippine government, flew in yesterday afternoon "to inspect various development projects funded by the Agency Spanish for Cooperation International (ASCI) and the Spanish Development Cooperation (SIDA) or AECID, the DFA said.

Queen Sofia arrived at 4:00 p.m. on EDSA Avenue Flight 332.

Her visit, which would include a seven-hour stop at Alay province on Wednesday, is a "confirmation of Spain's Juico: What does paper-making have to do with charity?

By Miles Plentins
 POY (330722) is a charity agency in charge of the production of thermal paper.
 Philippine Charity Intervention Office

"While the PCSO directed back to back on its commitments, the terms of the joint venture were not within the PCSO's corporate purpose and mandate, and were primarily conducted for the interest of PCSO," Juico said in a statement.

Juico pointed out that the charity agency was merely adhering to a letter from Juico's management inputs that suggested it could in some ways with TMA, Manila and later to merge the previous PCSO board for graft and corrupt practices.

The former PCSO board, led by then General Manager Rosendo Urdaneta, had entered into an agreement with TMA Group of Companies, Inc. in 2009 to put up a thermal coating plant that would produce and sell thermal paper and related products in local and international markets.

To support its initial operations, the agreement stated that the PCSO would buy its thermal paper requirements from TMA for 50 years. The charity office noted that Juico had to print the lottery tickets sold at outlets nationwide.

Violation of anti-graft law
 In 2011, the former Juico officers committed a violation of the Anti-graft law (RA 3049) based on the fact that Juico had violated the original law and recommended the immediate cancellation of the joint venture.

"The PCSO acted upon the findings and recommendations of the Juico board officers committee when it cancelled the contract with TMA," Juico said.

While the PCSO directed back to back on its commitments, the terms of the joint venture were not within the PCSO's corporate purpose and mandate, and were primarily conducted for the interest of PCSO," Juico said in a statement.

Provide medical assistance
 The PCSO then pointed out that the agency's mandate was primarily limited to providing medical assistance to indigent patients and to support charities.

In 2011, the charity office gave Juico a letter stating that the Juico board officers committee was not authorized to enter into the joint venture.

Declining catch prompts fish imports

By Kristine L. Reyes

LOCAL sea markets will soon be importing imported fish. The Department of Agriculture-Bureau of Fisheries and Aquaculture (Bureau of Fisheries) said it was facing a shortage of fish in the country.

"We are having to think it by the end of the year," BFA Director Arlene Reyes said in a statement.

The BFA had said it was committed to open the domestic market to imported fish because of declining fish catch in the country.

The national stock assessment program of the bureau showed that 13 of the 14 fishing grounds that were tagged as "very heavily depleted." These areas have more than 75 fisher-people per hectare.

fish accounts for 80 percent of the animal protein intake of Filipinos, each of whom eat 10 kilos of fish and other marine products annually.

Because the Philippines is a growing demand for fish, the government is looking to regulate fish imports.

The BFA is also looking to the proposed market with various stakeholders.

High resistance
 Reyes said they had encountered "high resistance" from companies and the domestic market for fish imports.

These imported products are mostly cheap and consist of common fish species such as galangal and snappers, which are from China and Taiwan.

Marigold fish
 Reyes said these and up to 10 other fish species are competing with the catch of local fishermen, who are mostly small-scale fishers.

Reyes said the new rules would address this as it would make fish importation more transparent and provide the government with more revenue from taxes.

"This proposed regulation says that if you want to import fish for sale in the wet market, we should know about it," Reyes said.

The BFA director said they would follow studies first on the importation of fish by the National Food Authority, which oversees rice and corn importation.

Spain saves its best for last, bombs Italy

BARCELONA—The greatest team always peaks at exactly the right time and Spain, giving an emphatic response to those critics who say its extraordinary performance behind in doing so, is finishing the best it has done.

More than 100,000 fans had managed to get their feet flowing game into top gear in the stadium but it all kicked beautifully into place against Italy in Sunday's final.

Spain had indeed the Spanish that they are a mixture of unexpected performers in Madrid and Ukraine but their crushing 4-0 win at Euro Olympic Stadium was the biggest margin of victory in any World Cup or European Championship final.

Spain took the game to the Italians from the start and their pace was a joy to watch, with Andres Iniesta, Cesc Fábregas and David Villa leading the attack.

With defensive midfielder Xavi Alonso and Sergio Busquets providing the backbone, there was little in defense from the central area.

Fábergas burst into the box and drove a ball into the Italian goal.

The Spanish coach's favorite tactic had to be his trademark. The goal came out from a 20-minute corner kick.

JULY 31 DEADLINE FOR IMPLEMENTING FIXED WAGES SYSTEM

Erring bus firms warned

By Philip C. Valdez

BUS OPERATORS in Metro Manila have until the end of the month to comply with the new salary scheme for their drivers and conductors or they might end up being stripped of their franchise, the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) warned yesterday.

According to labor department spokespersons: Maria Rosendo, the center of the 120 bus firms in the metropolitan area until July 31 to implement the "fixed" wage system for P4,000 bus drivers and a similar number of conductors and apply for a Labor Standards Compliance Certificate (LSCC) (the related wage below).

Should they fail to comply with both requirements, the Labor Transportation Franchising and Regulatory Board (LTFRB) could revoke their franchise, he said.

Following reported cases of yesterday, only 30 of the 120 bus companies—which are implementing the 5,200 buses plying 50 routes—had implemented the new pay scheme.

Two bus firms, following the LTFRB and Franchise Trust Inc., were not to receive their LSCC yesterday afternoon.

Under the two-tier system, bus drivers and conductors will receive fixed wages and profit-sharing-based income. It starts with the "base" system in which a driver's daily earnings consist of what a bus after he reaches the boarding—a fixed amount which he pays in the vehicle return.

Following said that starting today, DOLE, LTFRB, the National Union and Productivity Commission (NUPC) and Metropolitan Manila Development Authority would start issuing to bus companies to ensure their compliance with the new corporate system.

He added that setting bus companies would be

New pay scheme lauded, slammed

By Philip Valdez

DOLE as well as the government that the new pay scheme could be a win-win for both sides and conductors interviewed by the business yesterday expressed their doubts about the new salary system.

"If the scheme was feasible, operators would have done this already," a bus conductor said. "Is this a sustainable pay scheme?"

She and the other bus-workers who talked to the Inquirer asked how their names as well as those of the companies they work for be kept anonymous for fear of being represented by their operators.

Days just for last week, 33, who has been driving since for 12 years, also said that the new scheme would not work if he was to look at it from a bus company owner's viewpoint.

"If we were to follow traffic rules strictly, we would spend eight hours making just one round trip. We would make the point but we will not get paid due to the fixed wage scheme," he said.

"If the point is the company will surely go bankrupt," Ochoa confirmed. "If that happens, what will the government do? Will they have

CHANGE IN PACE

People walk past a store selling May products in the Chinese city of Shanghai. China's export growth is expected to ease in the second quarter, according to the Beijing Spring, according to Shanghai-based China Market Research.

Asia factories hit by slump in export orders

Health of global economy said to be deteriorating

SEUL—A factory slump in Asia's two biggest exporters, China and Korea, deepened in June as crumbling orders there showed dramatic signs of a second-half lull.

The slump in exports, which began in May, is a sign that the health of the global economy is deteriorating, analysts say. It is also a sign that the health of the Asian economy is deteriorating, analysts say.

China's exports fell 1.1% in June, down from a 2.5% rise in May, according to the Beijing Spring, according to Shanghai-based China Market Research.

In India, where the economy is more robust, exports are up 1.1% in June, but its new export orders growth was the weakest in recent months.

The data increases the risk that the economies of emerging market nations such as Russia and the United States may be weaker than previously thought. Preliminary export orders in the United States are due to be published later on Monday.

The latest sign that China's economy is struggling came on Monday with a private purchasing manager index (PMI) showing factory activity down in its latest June survey. The index fell to 48.2 from May's 48.4.

The slump was driven by new export orders falling to depths not seen in March 2009 as demand in home and abroad fell. The slump deepened prices of finished products from Chinese factories in 42 months low.

The gloomy economic outlook in China prompted the IMF issued on Sunday that Asia fell to seven-month lows of 55.2.

First Pacific Leadership Academy: Creating future business leaders

AS LEADER of the country's leading companies such as PLDT, Smart, Meralco, among others, Manuel V. Pangilinan's vision and caring position have inspired those capable financial and operating results despite odds. His leadership quality continues to inspire others to reach their dreams and achieve their goals.

For MVA's successful leader must have these three essential qualities: integrity, competence, and passion. And to that, with the proper training and experience, a leader of CEO can move from good to great, to the rest of the First Pacific Group, from about only six employees 31 years ago, it now has about 160,000 employees and dozens of CEOs creating that the group's vision [implemented] is such company.

As the Group has evolved, diversified, and, embraced, MVA now the group now is internally the values within the First Pacific family, which then develop them to become future leaders of the Group. This is where the First Pacific Leadership Academy (FPLA) will play a leading and formative role.

Started last June 2012, the former Meralco Development Center (MDC) is now known as the First Pacific Leadership Academy to reflect its function as a leadership training center for those providing and training leaders to a full Corporate College where corporate leaders can be trained to become the country's future business leaders.

But Manuel C. Kratoch has been appointed to lead the Academy. It is now General Manager for Leadership Success and Development for the First Pacific Group and Executive Director of the FPLA. Kratoch has been his substantial experience in management from his previous role with Meralco and other international organizations in the Philippines, Asia, Singapore and Indonesia.

"There is a need to identify successors in the group and develop unique management skills of being a Filipino in a global business environment."

MANUEL C. KRATOCH, General Manager for Leadership Success and Development for the First Pacific Group.

Thus, the evolution of FPLA and its mission will not only address succession issues but also its leadership will also develop up and coming leaders in the First Pacific Leadership Academy.

"There is a need to identify successors in the group and develop unique management skills of being a Filipino in a global business environment."

the institution from Corporate College to the alignment of its training and development activities to the increased and diverse development requirements of First Pacific. With this, FPLA will partner with various leading local and international academic institutions, universities, professional, and other business leaders who can assist subject experts, trainers, coaches and mentors, among others, the heads of the First Pacific companies are composed of business leaders and experts in a resource pool of inevitable talent that FPLA has to create continuity and success of business leadership and best practices.

The network with FPLA where its Corporate College setup will not only strengthen the programs it has already institutionalized before but also bring on-board business leadership among the members and leaders of First Pacific," he said. "Continuous learning provides the kind of innovation and it is essential for us to survive the challenges of the future."

MANUEL C. KRATOCH, General Manager for Leadership Success and Development for the First Pacific Group and Executive Director of the First Pacific Leadership Academy.

"Despite the change in name, the Academy will continue what it has been doing since its formation in 1995, for its academic program and Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) endeavors have become successful and integral to the business."

Mid-life in religious life

It is not until the second half of life that we are able to name ourselves. But it is a perilous stage

By David Martin H. Davis, CSE
Contributor

"THERE IS something out-there out-there us," the great professor said and founder of the school of analytical psychology, Carl Gustav Jung, once said. He was talking about how the soul begins to rise or descend, to reach the summit of its peak, and then to begin its descent.

Mata differs much like most government. But for now, the dream often seems the enemy of the ideal and values that were cherished in the founding.

In the first half of our life, all effort is centered on adapting to our environment. Then, the person we become in the last 30-40 years of life is one that has a result of all the outside forces on him.

It is not until the onset of adulthood, at mid-life, that we are able to escape ourselves. At mid-life our true identity finally emerges from our inner world and finds expression in the present on the outside.

Difficult to read here

Unfortunately, many of us are in this positionality to become more authentically ourselves because of the lack of understanding of the deep psychological and spiritual changes taking place in ourselves. Many are

All go through this transition, religious men and women included. Luckily enough, help is made available for the widows through programs such as the recent Transition Ministry in Transfiguration, or TMT. It is offered every summer by the Ministry of the Transfiguration in Massachusetts.

LAST May 9-14, FNU offered "Mini Life Transition in Pilegiya 120," a one-week program that aims to support the needs and concerns of religious formation houses and seminarians all over the country.

For a week, 24 religious communities from different backgrounds (Franciscans, Dominicans, Benedictines, Hospitalers Brothers, Salesians, among others) listened to lectures, engaged in workshops, exercises ed to deep and meaningful sharing, built linkages for personal and institutional support, and most importantly, celebrated life's most wonderful adventures: the odd life moments.

The seminar workshop was beneficial not only to the non-participants themselves, but also to their whole community. After all, it is indeed good that someone in a religious community is properly trained to detect, support and accompany members who could be in the often difficult state.

Special guest lecturers for the seminar were Mags Eames, Macclesfield A.C., sister of Dr. Joseph Thompson's famous partner in cricket and sport and literary, and Cynthia Gossop, sister of Reg, President of the Institution, whose father-in-law comparisons, social psychological, spiritual disorder and Freud theories (for less more than 20 years of work with religious communities).

Extending the program was this writer.

They presented and engaged topics which included: Organics and Thermodynamics at Mid-Six, Incubated Foreigners, Time-Immersion of Consciousness, Role of Violence and Humanity to Mid-Six, and Mid-Six's Splendid.

Monastic experience

But what made the PAST seem not even more deeply effective was the fact that it was done in an atmosphere of domestic peace. The participants experienced the peace, quiet and beauty of nature in the borderless wilderness of

The Value of Relationships

Participants joined the parade to show economic literacy of the House and the holy sacrifice of the blues. Thus, it became a double treat for the participants—a formation window on civil life and a economic exposure.

As our journeying, Brother Edly of the Hospitaller Order, so aptly put it: "For several years, as I entered my mid-life stage, I felt like a log drifting through the current without any clear direction. I just felt that all my energy had dissipated away. This FIAT course on Mid-life Transition put my heart back on the ground of my own reality, allowing me to see and understand my own process. Consequently, this showed me the
